Washout in Near Vicinity of Phoenix Ties up North Bound Passenger Train.

The storm continued during all of Wednesday, although in somewhat of an intermittent form, being more like March than January weather. Violent gusts of wind accompanied by a heavy fall of snow, lasting for several minutes would be followed by a lull in the wind and a few minutes of sunshine and these alternating periods continued during the day, the storm periods being of sufficient force to keep quite a current of water in the street gutters.
